Group Actions for misleading advertising campaigns: if not now, when?

Thursday 13 September 2018

For some time it has been possible for consumers to seek redress directly in the face of misleading marketing campaigns. Normally the financial risk arising is insignificant. However, such actions are commonplace in the US and are brought as class actions. The effect on a business can be seismic.

Our session will examine the state of the law here, and the scope for Group Actions. For now the genie is in the bottle, but for how long?

- The state of affairs in the US
- Consumer rights here for direct redress
- How is a Group established? Are they becoming more common?
- Is the threat a real one?
- Ongoing Group Actions today
- How brands and agencies should manage risk

The new E-Privacy Regulation: Impacts and challenges for marketers and advertisers

Wednesday 7 November 2018

Whilst all the attention has been focussed on the GDPR, European legislators have been busy putting the finishing touches to the new E-Privacy Regulation. Together with the GDPR the Regulation will have a significant legal and commercial impact on all forms of electronic marketing and digital advertising. This session will navigate the new rules and identify the challenges and opportunities for brand owners and their vendors in the following areas:

- Data collection: how does the Regulation impact on the collection of data intended to be used for marketing campaigns?
- Data analytics: Will I need to obtain user consent? Will I still be able to create customer segments? Will I need to renew my consents?
- Electronic marketing communications: I've collected the data, I've analysed it so what else do I need to think about before I can use that data to send communications to my audience?
- The impact on engagement and retention
